Santiago Sanchez
Professor Albers-Morris
Text & Code - ENGL 215
9/14/24

Code as Text Response

I chose to do the creative writing assignment for writing code as H.P. Lovecraft. I chose to do the "Happy Numbers" prompt. I am most familiar with H.P. Lovecraft because I do not read much but I am reading his mythos because I love the horror elements. He is most famous for his creations of creatures such as Cthulhu portrayed as old gods making his own subgenre of horror. Also famous for his controversial personality which shows very much in his writing. A lot of stories may pertain or include heavily prejudiced sections. I chose to include this in the terms of a man defending his homeland from "savage beings". These savage beings could either be interpreted as creatures or people and both would fit his ideals. The story is also written from a first-person perspective because most of his stories are. I am not as creative as him but he loves to describe everything in dark detail, so I tried to find synonyms for almost every other word to make it as verbose as possible. I also wanted the story to end in either a dark/mysterious way so there are two possible endings whether the code works or not.